

Gabriella Erdélyi (PhD 2003) is currently the principal investigator of MTA BTK Lendület Integrating Families Research Group (2017–2022), in which her responsibilities include coordinating an extensive research group and performing new research on the cultural history of early modern stepfamilies. She is a Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of History, Research Centre for the Humanities, Hungarian Academy of Sciences. She also serves as the founding editor of The Hungarian Historical Review (www.hunghist.org), a peer-reviewed international quarterly of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences (MTA). She has organized international conferences and carried out several research projects, including Family, Marriage and Divorce in late medieval and early modern Hungary (National Cultural Fund, 2013–2014) and Church, Law and Society: The Petitions of the Apostolic Penitentiary (Hungarian Research Fund - OTKA, 2010–2015). Erdélyi has been the recipient of the academic prizes of the Young Scholars' Prize awarded by MTA (2003), and the Prize of Bolyai-Plakett (2015). Her research has focused on the social and cultural history of late medieval and early modern Hungary in a European context, with particular interest in lay religious culture, religious conversion and coexistence, the social history of the Protestant Reformation and of the Catholic Revival, the history of crime, violence and justice, social mobility and learning as well as the history of women, family and marriage. Her latest articles were published in peer-reviewed international journals such as the Journal of Social History, the Journal of Ecclesiastical History and the Hungarian Historical Review. Her list of publications includes three monographs (one in English), two volumes of Latin text edition, five edited volumes and special thematic issues of journals (four in English), and several articles and chapters in peer-reviewed international journals and collection of studies. She has recently published A Cloister on Trial: Religious Culture and Everyday Life in Late Medieval Hungary (Farnham: Ashgate, 2015), edited Armed Memory. Agency and Peasant Revolts in Central and Southern Europe, 1450-1700 (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2015) and has a forthcoming book with Brill Publisher for spring 2018 (entitled: Negotiating Violence: Papal Pardons and Everyday Life in East Central Europe, 1450–1550).
